

Dr Krassi Rumchev

SHORT PROFESSIONAL INFO

Krassi Rumchev has more than 20 years of research experience in the areas of environmental and occupational health. Current research includes exposure assessment to airborne particles and the associated adverse health effects. Dr Rumchev's research interests include also developments and implementations of new strategies to promote healthy environments for adults and children.

- CURRENT POSITION: Program Leader, Health, Safety and Environment Program, Curtin University, Perth, Australia;
- ACADEMIC QUALIFICATIONS: MSc (Physics), PhD (Environmental Science);
- PROFESSIONAL AND RESEARCH CONTRIBUTIONS: Significant contribution to teaching and research in the area of environmental and occupational health;
- RESEARCH AREAS: Main research areas of interest include air quality, climate change, indoor air quality, exposure assessment to environmental and occupational hazards;
- SCIENTIFIC ACHIEVEMENTS AND AWARDS, MEMBERSHIPS: Dr Rumchev has national and international research recognition which is acknowledged with being a member of

Peer Review Journals' Editorial Boards, and numerous citations of her published work;

Professional memberships: Professional Member, Australian Industrial Occupational

Hygiene Society (AIOH); Chartered Professional Member, Safety Institute of Australia

(SIA); Professional Member, American Conference of Industrial Hygienists (ACGIH)

- MAJOR PUBLICATIONS – More than 30 research publications in peer review journals and 4 Book Chapters